

Subject: Asancha Homepage – Final UX Feedback

Hi Tolu,

Thank you for the latest homepage updates. I have reviewed the current implementation and I am happy with the overall direction. The key positioning and UX changes we discussed have now been implemented well.

In particular, please retain the current hero direction, including:

- * UK Property Sourcing & Investment Platform
- * Source Smarter Property Opportunities, All in One Place
- * The supporting proposition connecting investors with opportunities from owners, agents and sourcers
- * Find Properties and List a Property as the primary actions
- * The simplified property search using Location/Postcode, Budget and Investment Strategy, with advanced criteria under More Filters
- * The sourcing-first navigation and early visibility of property opportunities

These elements now communicate Asancha's core proposition much more clearly and do not need to be redesigned again.

Main Outstanding Issue – The Homepage Is Still Too Long

Although the individual sections are much better, the homepage as a whole still feels too long and contains more explanation than a first-time visitor needs.

The homepage should primarily help a visitor:

Understand what Asancha is → See property opportunities → Understand why Asancha is different → Choose their next action.

It should act as the entry point into the platform, rather than trying to explain every Asancha capability, audience and workflow on one page.

Please therefore make one final simplification pass, focusing on consolidating and removing overlapping content rather than adding anything new.

Recommended Final Homepage Structure

1. Hero + Property Search — KEEP

Keep the current sourcing proposition, Find Properties/List a Property CTAs and simplified search.

2. Latest Property Opportunities — KEEP HIGH ON THE PAGE

Show approximately 3–4 opportunities with the most decision-useful information and a clear:

View All Properties →

This should remain near the top because actual property opportunities demonstrate Asancha's sourcing proposition better than additional explanatory content.

3. One Platform. Built Around Property Sourcing — SIMPLIFY

Keep this concept but reduce the amount of content.

At homepage level, three routes are sufficient:

Investors – Find property opportunities

Property Owners – List property opportunities

Professionals – Agents, Sourcers & Service Providers

Detailed explanations for Agents, Property Sourcers, Service Providers and API Partners should live on their dedicated pages rather than each requiring substantial homepage content.

Property Sourcers should remain clearly accessible under Professionals because they are an important source of opportunities for Asancha.

4. Why Asancha / Investment Intelligence — CONSOLIDATE

Rather than having several sections explaining intelligence, matching and AI separately, combine these into one strong visual section.

The current property intelligence example is a good direction. It should demonstrate something like:

Asking Price — Fact

Estimated Rent — Estimate

Gross Yield — Calculation

Investor Match — Algorithmic Match

Why it matches / doesn't match

AI-supported Insight

This demonstrates Asancha's differentiation without repeatedly describing the platform as "AI-powered".

5. How It Works — REDUCE

Keep the homepage journey extremely simple:

Discover → Evaluate → Progress

Matching can form part of Evaluate rather than requiring another major step.

Any detailed registration, onboarding, verification, reservation or transaction steps should sit on the dedicated How It Works page or appear at the appropriate point within the web app.

6. Trust & Transparency — KEEP BUT SHORTEN

Trust is important, but the homepage does not need to explain the complete governance model.

A concise section covering:

Verified information where applicable | Controlled access | Explainable insights | Traceable progression followed by Learn More → would be sufficient.

Detailed verification, trust, AI governance and access rules should sit on the relevant supporting pages.

7. Final CTA — KEEP

End with one strong conversion section, for example:

Ready to Source Your Next Property Opportunity?

Find Properties | List a Property

Then move directly into the footer.

Content That Should Move Off the Homepage

Please move detailed information about individual professional journeys, API Partners, detailed onboarding/registration steps, detailed verification processes, extensive AI explanations and operational platform workflows to their relevant internal pages.

The functionality should remain in Asancha; we are simply reducing how much of it needs to be explained on the homepage.

Two Minor Consistency Changes

Please also ensure the footer uses the same sourcing-first positioning as the hero. Avoid describing Asancha simply as a “public property platform.”

Suggested footer description:

“A UK property sourcing and investment platform connecting investors with property opportunities from owners, agents and sourcers.”

Also standardise Find Properties as the customer-facing terminology rather than switching between Find Properties and Marketplace in public navigation.

Important – Please Do Not Add More Homepage Sections

At this point, I don't want additional features or sections added to the homepage.

The platform itself can remain comprehensive. The homepage does not need to be.

The objective of this final pass is therefore:

Reduce → Consolidate → Prioritise → Direct users into the appropriate journey.

Ideally, I would expect this simplification to reduce the current homepage content by approximately 30–40%, while retaining the important proposition and conversion points.

Final Direction

The homepage positioning and overall design direction are approved. The remaining request is to make the page shorter, easier to scan and less repetitive.

Please preserve the principle:

Property sourcing is Asanacha's core proposition. Intelligence, matching, verification and professional support should differentiate and strengthen that sourcing journey rather than create additional complexity on the homepage.

Once this final homepage simplification is completed, I would like us to move the focus away from further homepage redesign and onto the key end-to-end web-app journeys: Investor, Property Owner, Property Sourcer, property search/detail, registration/onboarding, verification and deal progression.

Thank you.

Home Page Final Update

Please can you get this done ASAP as final update for the homepage

Subject: Asanacha Homepage – Final Minor Updates

Hi Team,

Thank you for the latest homepage update.

I have reviewed the current version again and can see that the homepage has been significantly improved and shortened. The overall structure, positioning and user journey are now much clearer.

I am happy with the current direction, particularly:

- * The UK Property Sourcing & Investment Platform positioning.
- * The “Source Smarter Property Opportunities, All in One Place” hero proposition.
- * Find Properties and List a Property as the primary actions.
- * The simplified property search.
- * Showing Latest Property Opportunities very early on the page.
- * The Investment Intelligence example showing Facts, Calculations, Estimates, Match and AI-supported insight.
- * The clearer Investor, Property Owner and Professional routes.
- * The overall reduction in homepage content.

Please retain these elements. I am not requesting another homepage redesign.

There are just a few final refinements I would like:

1. Simplify the How It Works journey

The section heading currently communicates Discover. Evaluate. Progress., but the steps underneath still include Discover → Evaluate → Match → Progress.

Please simplify this to:

Discover → Evaluate → Progress

Matching should sit within Evaluate, as assessing how well a property matches an investor's requirements is part of evaluating the opportunity.

2. Review “Bring a Property Opportunity to Asancha”

This section appears to repeat information already communicated through the Property Owner and Professional routes.

Please either merge this message into the relevant Property Owner/Professional section or remove the standalone section if it does not add a distinct user action.

The aim is to avoid unnecessary duplication and make the homepage slightly shorter.

3. Keep Trust & Transparency concise

The Trust & Transparency section is important and should remain, but please keep the homepage version concise.

The homepage should communicate the key trust principles at a glance, with detailed information available through a Learn More link rather than explaining the full verification/governance process on the homepage.

4. Update the footer positioning

Please replace:

“A UK-focused public property platform...”

with:

“A UK property sourcing and investment platform connecting investors with property opportunities from owners, agents and sourcers.”

This keeps the footer consistent with the main Asancha proposition.

5. Standardise Find Properties / Marketplace terminology

The main navigation uses Find Properties, while Marketplace is still used in the footer.

Please use Find Properties consistently for the customer-facing property discovery journey. “Marketplace” can remain an internal/domain term where required.

Final Direction

The homepage has now reached a stage where I am happy with the overall UX, positioning and length.

These are final refinements rather than another redesign. Please avoid adding additional homepage sections or expanding the existing sections again.

The principle going forward should be:

Keep the homepage simple enough to understand Asancha, discover property opportunities and choose the appropriate journey. Detailed functionality and explanations should sit within the relevant pages of the web application.

Once these minor items are completed, I am happy to sign off the homepage and move the focus to the end-to-end product journeys, particularly:

Investor → Property Owner → Property Sourcer → Property Search/Details → Registration/Onboarding → Verification → Deal Progression.

Thank you.
